Under the artistic leadership of Mikhail Baryshnikov, the company has presented a diverse repertory of classical and contemporary ballet since its inception in 1965. The company now presents approximately seventy full-length ballets each season, including a mix of classic ballets, contemporary premieres, and new commissions by choreographers such as Christopher Wheeldon, Anne-Marie McDermott, Twyla Tharp, John Neumeier, Wayne McGregor, Ohad Naharin, Justin Peck, and David Parsons. Many of these works are often performed with a mixed bill of dance and opera; some ballets have been mounted as concert performances. New York City Ballet has made notable contributions to the development of ballet and dance in the United States and abroad. The company has performed in many of the world's great dance centers, including The Metropolitan Opera House, the Kennedy Center, the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, the Venice Biennale, the Royal Danish Ballet, the Paris Opera, the Royal Ballet, the Bolshoi Theatre, and the Bolshoi-Kirov Ballet, among others.
