She tells us about the dog, the artist and the inspirational story behind the painting. Peanut was a handsome golden retriever I rescued from an animal shelter. He had been on a chain for a couple of years and I was worried he was going to be afraid. But after he had a thorough cleaning he made a lot of friends and got a chance to become part of a loving family. Peanut was an old dog, a mature one. But he was a goofball and loved to run, play and be silly. I'd go for a long walk with him and he'd take off ahead of me. One day I felt he was behind me and I stopped to look at him. He was sitting still with his head down, like he was going to cry. When he finally looked up at me he had tears streaming down his face. He was very happy. I never saw him cry after that. Peanut always wanted to be near me. He would jump up on my lap and lay his head on my shoulder and purr. The other day I was painting and I made a splatter of paint on his face. I told him to look up at me. He always looked up at me. He was always waiting for me to speak to him. I gave him my bed on special occasions, but he always preferred to sleep in the floor. He'd sleep with me and wake up early to go play with his brothers and sisters. He was a lovable guy. Peanut was a 12-year-old golden retriever. In 1999 he was diagnosed with lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph nodes. A few weeks after he was diagnosed the vet gave him six months to a year to live. That was at the beginning of summer. I took Peanut for a walk one day and he went under a parked truck. He couldn't get up. I couldn't get him out. It was quite a shock. I
