Kaspersky Endpoint Security 10 Crack Keygen

Kaspersky Endpoint Security 10 Free Activation Key. SafeMode picture Q: Wrap the NSTextView and the NSTextContainerView in separate NSView I have a NSTextView which is in a NSView that is in another NSView. I would like to be able to allow a user to select some text in the NSTextView, then get their selection and put it into the "clipboard" (they might also have dragged it, just to complicate things). I was going to try to set the selectedRange in the NSTextView's delegate, but there's a problem: the NSTextView itself does not have a mouse listener, so the delegate will never get the mouse event. And of course, the text view doesn't have a delegate, so the delegate would never get notified of the selection, either. Is there any way I can do this?
A: I did this by creating a subclass of NSTextView with the following methods: -(BOOL)mouseDownCanMoveWindow:(BOOL)flag - (void)performDragOperation:(id)sender - (void)validateUserInterfaceItem:(id)item I also added the -beginValidationFor: and -endValidationFor: methods to the NSTextView delegate. It seems to work as expected. Update: I have since learned that this solution is not very robust and will not work in all cases.
